YOUR VISIT STARTS HERE ... AYSGARTH FALLS

Housed in converted railway cottages and with the popular Coppice Café on site, Aysgarth Falls National Park Centre is located right by the spectacular three-stepped waterfalls, with lovely Freeholders' Wood on its doorstep.

Drop by for a wealth of information about the local area. Displays in the centre relate the story of the woodland as a natural larder, the rocks beneath our feet and how the falls were created.

Our knowledgeable Information Advisors can tell you all about the wildlife you'll see and how the woodland is managed - including the right of the 'freeholders' of Carperby to collect coppiced wood.

Why not enjoy the circular woods and falls walk, then treat yourself to lunch in the café garden, spotting the local wildlife at the bird feeders.

What's local

Aysgarth Falls is surrounded by pretty villages, fascinating history and a stunning woods and waterfalls landscape.

The former name of the Aysgarth Falls Hotel - the Palmer Flatt Hotel - in Aysgarth came from the fact that it is reputed to stand on the site of a Medieval hospice where pilgrims returning from the Holy Land in poor health were treated. They often carried palm leaves back with them as mementos and so became known as 'palmers'. Top tip? Explore on foot - there's always something new to discover. The light is always changing, the river rises and falls so every view is fresh. I love the diversity of the landscape within the National Park.

Best view of all? From Raydaleside to Hawes, looking west with all of Wensleydale opening up before you.

Favourite walk? The bridleway above Carperby with its long views and the interest of mining remains, stone circles and then down to the nature reserve at Ballowfield.

Get outdoors

Walking the Settle Loop

No trip to the Yorkshire Dales would be complete without spending some time outdoors in these fantastic surroundings. For many people this could be a short stroll or a riverside picnic, but there are plenty of opportunities to get more adventurous.

There is a huge variety of walks to do whether you want to tick off some peaks or go for a valley hike. You can come for the spring flowers, summer meadows, the autumn colours or a play in the snow. There are old mining remains to be found, waterfalls to visit and wildlife to see.

One of the special things about the Yorkshire Dales is the limestone scenery - and that means crags, sinkholes, dry valleys and caves. There are three show caves in the area for a first visit underground, and if you are keen to see more you can team up with a guide to explore further. Then there is the chance to be lowered into Gaping Gill

- one of the largest underground caverns in the country - on the winch meets in May and August.

If caving is not your thing, then there are outdoor instructors who will take you climbing, abseiling or teach you the navigation skills to allow you to find your way in the hills.

And with the Tour de France coming in 2014, no guide to the National Park would be complete without mentioning cycling. There is a fantastic network of quiet roads to explore in the Dales - some of which are even relatively flat. However, for many cyclists it is taking on the area's many great climbs which they come for - roads such as Buttertubs Pass, Fleet Moss and Park Rash are recognised as some of the best in the country.

If you prefer to get off the road, then the network of bridleways is outstanding with a massive variety of routes to choose from. You can explore these by mountain bike or on horse back, and if you don't have one of your own then you can hire one while you are here.

The ups and downs of hill farming

Hill farming with sheep and cattle has been a part of Dales' life for thousands of years. It has left its mark on the landscape - with its intricate pattern of pastures and meadows, field barns and drystone walls.

Mastiles Lane was once part of a network of drovers' tracks criss-crossing Malham Moor on the great journeys south, while wealthy monastic houses were probably the first bridge builders in the Dales - Fountains Abbey's fleece-trading route crossed the River Wharfe at Conistone and the monks built a bridge here wide enough to carry wagons.

Farming has always gone hand in hand with the need to adapt, whether to the land and climate or to changes in the economics of agriculture and scale of production.

Mixed grazing with sheep and cattle allows farmers to maximise the financial yield of their land, especially in more remote and unforgiving areas. It's good for the environment, too, letting a greater diversity of plants and insects flourish.

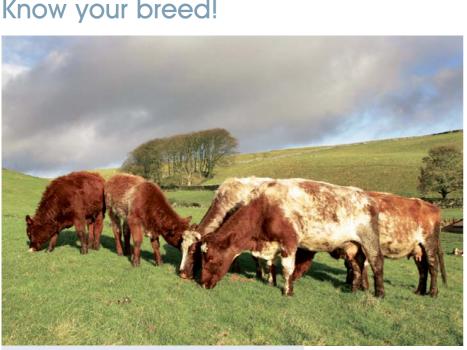

The native livestock breeds seen in the Dales today - some of which are highlighted on these pages - have been historically bred to fit in with their surroundings. They are able to cope with the harsh climate and the less nutritious vegetation but still develop into a top quality animal, albeit over a longer period of time than their continental cousins.

Sheep and cattle have different grazing habits which, when mixed together, make best use of the vegetation across a farm. Sheep, with their smaller mouths, are able to bite off vegetation and graze it to a very even height. Their nimble lips allow them to select the more palatable plants.

Cattle on the other hand tear and pull at the vegetation by wrapping their tongues around the long stems. This produces a more tussocky appearance and, because they aren't as choosy as sheep, lets a range of plant species develop.

Mixed grazing - as well as moving livestock around - allows land to breathe and replenish, keeps poorer grasses in check and improves biodiversity, allowing a richer variety of wildflowers and wildlife to thrive, as well as helping farmers to make greater use of their land.

Gentle-natured and extremely hardy, Belted Galloways have a coat that sheds rain, making them good for year-round grazing. A broad white belt and a black (or brown) body make 'Belties' stand out from the crowd.

Agile and sure-footed, the Beef Shorthorn can adapt to the harshest conditions.

The female Blue Grey excels at raising calves in the hills on poor forage.

Extremely hardy and intelligent, the Highland can tolerate the worst weather conditions including driving rain and extreme cold - thanks to its double coat. The long, coarsehaired ginger outer layer is waterproof and is shed every summer.

Originating in Scotland in the 1940s the docile Luing was a cross between the rugged Highland heifer and the Shorthorn bull and bred to suit hill country. They tend to be red, roan and yellow in colour.

SHEEP

Both the Swaledale and Dalesbred were developed from the original horned hill sheep farmed in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries in the north Pennines and uplands of Scotland.

The head and legs show the clearest differences between the two. The Dalesbred has a distinct white patch either side of its nostrils, and the head is black with a grey nose and black and white ears. The Swaledale has a mostly black head but with grey patches around the eyes and nose and grey ears. Both have mottled legs - black and white for Dalesbreds and grey and white for Swaledales.

Synonymous with the hill country of the Dales, it's no wonder a Swaledale ram is the logo of the National Park.

The Dalesbred is becoming a rarer sight, with only 150 breeders currently in the UK. It is generally found in the Yorkshire Dales, Nidderdale and Forest of Bowland.

Usually found in the western Dales in Cumbria, the Rough Fell is one of the largest hill sheep breeds. With a docile nature and good mothering instincts, it can be recognised by the broad white patch across its black face. Both ewes and rams are horned.

Originating from the Lleyn Peninsula in North Wales, more Lleyn are now being reared and bred in the Dales. Placid and heavier than the horned breeds, they produce weightier lambs.

Hill farmers Tom Metcalfe and his son Philip have worked hard to conserve the countryside around their Swaledale home.

The 260 hectares they farm at Usha Gap, near Muker, cover some of the most stunning landscape in the Dales. They also have grazing rights for the sheep on the moor tops at Muker and Ivelet, both of which are in Sites of Special Scientific Interest.

The family has been farming in Swaledale for generations, raising flocks of pure Swaledale sheep. Philip's grandfather moved to Usha Gap in the 1930s and the family now also has a herd of Limousin Cross sucklers for beef, along with a campsite and a holiday home.

Thanks to the father-and-son team, miles of drystone walls have been repaired, a good cluster of barns are still standing that would otherwise be roofless shells, and some vital meadows are in tip top condition.

The incentive to do that little bit more came in the form of the Government's Environmentally Sensitive Areas (ESA) Scheme - a package of agri-environment projects now celebrating its 25th birthday.

The Pennine Dales ESA was one of the first to be introduced in 1987 and Tom signed up as soon as he could.

The aim of the scheme was to offer incentives to farmers to adopt agricultural practices that would safeguard and enhance parts of the country of particularly high landscape, wildlife or historic value.

Philip, 40, said the decision to join was easy.

'Hill farms are the worst pieces of land in terms of quality," he said.

"We were farming traditionally and it was a case of either going into the ESA or intensive farming to compete with other people.

"We didn't want to intensify because it would have meant spraying the fields and using lots of nitrogen, which would have wiped out the hay meadows almost overnight. And once the land has been fertilised heavily and re-seeded you can't go back.

"Most people keep their boundary walls up and the internal ones fall into disrepair because it's uneconomic to look after them. And it's the same with the little barns - we have about 30 but we only use six or seven of them.

"The ESA grants have paid for the walls and the barns to be repaired so they are in good condition and remain part of the landscape. That in turn encourages tourists to come in - the top end of Swaledale is unique and it has been preserved like this."

He and Tom, who is 70, are now going into the Higher Level Stewardship of the new Environmental Stewardship scheme and will be starting work fencing off some gills to allow plant life to regenerate.

"The knock-on effect of having the ESA money is that it helps the local economy - farmers are big spenders if they have the money and they buy locally and employ local people to do the work," Philip said.

He is hoping his sons Ben, 12, and 10-year-old James will follow in the family's footsteps.

"The young one's keen enough although the older boy isn't yet but you never know - times can change."

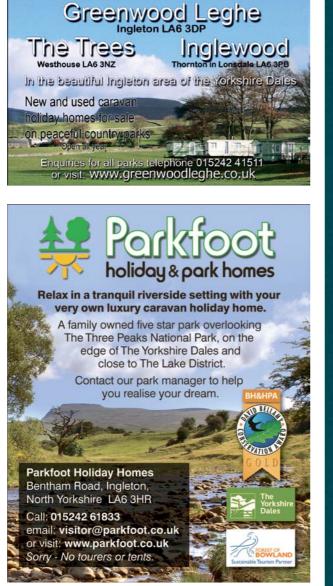

Ingleton

Nestled in the

Ingleborough foothills, Ingleton is surrounded by deep caves, spectacular waterfalls and fascinating archaeological sites.

Local attractions include White Scar Cave, Britain's longest show cave, and the lovely Ingleton Waterfalls Walk and climbing Ingleborough and Whernside for the fantastic limestone pavements of Twisleton Scar and superb views is a must.

Stroll along the river bank, sit in the Millennium Gardens or visit Ingleton Pottery family run and the longest established working pottery in the Dales. Tickets for the great indoor climbing wall can be bought from caving and climbing shop, Inglesport.

YOUR VISIT STARTS HERE...REETH

Working in partnership with the local community, Reeth National Park Centre is located in Hudson House at the top of the village green on the cobbled square.

Inside, you'll find the usual great advice about local attractions and a shop to stock up on maps, books and more. Next to it is a lovely walled orchard, open to the public and cared for by the local community.

The former bank - giant vault still intact - hosts a range of useful services for local residents and visitors alike. You can have a coffee while enjoying internet access and a Richmondshire District Council kiosk offers a range of council-related services. It's also a base for the local police officer.

Sitting amongst the remains of Swaledale's leadmining past in the hills above, the village of Reeth is a focal point for the dale and has plenty of places to eat, shop and relax as well as a notable number of arts and craft studios.

I think for a family visiting Reeth with children the nicest walk is the short 2 miles to Grinton as it passes the children's playground, which is always a good place to stop, then over the Swing Bridge or into the water for a paddle. Have a look at the church then onto the Dales Bike Centre for tea and cakes (they serve gluten free) then back into Reeth for Brymor Ice Cream.

If you have babies or small children you can hire a backpack from the Swaledale Outdoors shop. The shop also has a map room so the grown-ups can read the notes left by Coast to Coast walkers on the interactive map - it might be an incentive to try it yourself!

Walking over the hushes at Booze

The classic barns and walls landscape of Swaledale

Don't leave here without...

- Visiting the Swaledale Museum to learn about the hard life the leadminers endured through its moving exhibits.
- Driving through the famous water splash in Arkengarthdale, as featured in the opening credits of the tv programme All Creatures Great and Small.
- Meandering through the wildflower meadows in full bloom and taking in the classic Swaledale barns and walls landscape.
- Stopping to peer down the Buttertubs when you travel over the moor top between Swaledale and Wensleydale.
- Having a pint at Tan Hill the highest pub in England.

Sheep judging at Muker Show

What's on

- Reeth Show (26 August) and Muker Show
 (4 September) two traditional agricultural shows, expect sheep judging, entertainment from Muker silver band and fell races.
- Swaledale Festival (25 May to 8 June) two weeks of stunning musical performances, from orchestral to comic.

What's local

If it's food and drink you're after, then Reeth has pubs and tearooms aplenty, not to mention an icecream parlour and bakery. There's a corner shop, post office and garage, outdoor shop and gifts, as well as the many makers' studios all around.

Alternatively , you can take to the hills on two wheels from the Dales Bike Centre at Fremington or on horseback from Arklemoor Riding Centre. After dinner at a tasty eatery such as local favourite the CB Inn in Arkengarthdale, get your head down for a good night's sleep at Grinton Lodge Youth Hostel housed in a former Victorian shooting lodge or one of the many lovely hotels and B&Bs.

Wensleydale

The River Ure winds down Wensleydale from Hawes, passing Askrigg, Bainbridge and Aysgarth on its way to the market towns of Leyburn and Middleham. England's shortest river, the Bain, links Semer Water to the River Ure at Bainbridge. Nearby are several beautiful waterfalls: Hardraw Force, Aysgarth Falls, Mill Gill Force and West Burton Force.

Bolton Castle

Hawes is where you can find excellent cafés and shops to wander around as well as being able to see the famous Wensleydale Cheese being made. You can also see rope being spun at Outhwaites, which is next door to the Dales Countryside Museum. Run by the Yorkshire Dales National Park Authority, the Dales Countryside Museum is a great starting point for any trip to the Dales, explaining more about its history, and the life of farmers and former lead miners.

Water is the power behind nearby Gayle Mill, an atmospheric eighteenth century cotton and later saw mill which has been recently restored, and which represents nearly 230 years of industrial and social heritage.

You can enjoy a journey on the vintage Wensleydale Railway which runs from Leeming Bar, to Redmire, near Castle Bolton. Bolton Castle in the contrarily named village of Castle Bolton is a fantastic vantage point from which to admire the Wensleydale countryside.

For the big kid in everyone head to the Forbidden Corner to solve the riddles and explore the hidden passages.

Don't leave here without...

- Hitting the Snaizeholme red squirrel trail to see these native creatures in their favourite habitat.
- Visiting Gayle Mill star of BBC TV's 'Restoration' - with its restored Victorian water-powered wood-working machinery.
- Heading to Hardraw Force, the longest single drop waterfall in England and site of an annual brass band contest.
- Calling in at the 100-year-old Hawes Auction Mart for a real slice of farming life.
- Going to the home of Wensleydale cheese the Wensleydale Creamery - with its visitor centre and shop.
- Watching traditional ropemaking to see how the twist is put in at Outhwaite Ropemakers.

Seasonal and foraged berries can be tuned into delicious drinks: from the Museum kitchen

What's on

- Hawes & District Gala (22 June) fancy dress parade, sideshows and children's races.
- Hardraw Scar Brass Band Contest (8 September) - this outdoor spectacle has been taking place for over 130 years.
- Hawes Christmas Lights (7 December) the annual turning on of the lights, with carol singing and a visit by Father Christmas.

View over Hawes

If you haven't already filled up on Wensleydale cheese, join the farmers in a local pub on auction day, try some local produce at one of the market town's cafés, or drop by Hawes institution, Elijah Allen - familyrun since 1860 - for groceries.

Hawes has a great range of shops to browse including antiques, gifts for your home and outdoor clothing. as well as a supermarket, chemist and newsagent. There is a petrol station and cashpoint and a weekly outdoor market on Tuesday.

Swaledale & Arkengarthdale

Swaledale is the perfect place to retreat from a busy world and relax

The River Swale is one of England's fastest rising spate rivers, rushing its way between Thwaite, Muker, Reeth and on to Richmond. At the head of Swaledale is the tiny village of Keld, the crossing point of the Coast to Coast Walk and the Pennine Way long distance footpaths. Keld was once a more populous place at the peak of the lead mining boom. Learn some of its history at the Keld Countryside and Heritage Centre.

On the moors you're likely to see the hardy Swaledale sheep. They are key to the livelihood of many Dales farmers and the logo for the Yorkshire Dales National Park.

In the lower areas, you'll see tranquil hay meadows (at their best in the early summer months) bordered by a myriad of drystone walls and punctuated by field barns.

It is hard to believe these calm pastures and wild moors were ever a site for industry but at Gunnerside Gill you can still see the remains of the former lead mining industry. Find out more about local life by visiting Swaledale Museum in Reeth or Hazel Brow Farm at Low Row.

Whilst here why not go on a Camera Ramble with the folk from Scenic View Gallery, or learn some navigation with Mark Reid and colleagues at Team Walking.

'Companionship' (Sarah Smith): Swaledale sheep

After the exercise there are some great cafés and pubs to enjoy. Why not have a drink at Tan Hill the highest pub in England.
